With the help of her kindly teacher (and a little magic), this miraculous girl proves that everyone has the power to change their story – and that sometimes, you have to be a little bit naughty.

SCRIPT CONTENT DETAILS:

Language

There is limited use of strong language. There are a few instances of "hell," and several instances of adults calling children names such as "brat" and "stink worm." In the opening scene depicting Matilda's birth, Mr. Wormwood wonders where the baby's "thingy" is.

Violence

There are depictions of violence throughout, mostly involving the verbal and physical abuse of children by Miss Trunchbull. These moments include: rumors of Trunchbull throwing a child out a window; Trunchbull hammer-throwing a child across the playground; Trunchbull yelling at Matilda saying "I shall crush you! I shall pound you!"; Trunchbull leading an overly intense gym class; Trunchbull grabbing a child by the ears and stretching them; Trunchbull forcing a child to eat an entire cake; Trunchbull threatening to lock children in the chokey, a cupboard in her office lined with nails, spikes, and broken glass; Trunchbull dragging children offstage to take them to the chokey; and Trunchbull revealing a collection of chokeys intended for Matilda and her classmates.

Throughout the show, Matilda tells the story of a husband-and-wife acrobatic team who perform a dangerous stunt that leads to the wife breaking all her bones and dying after giving birth to their daughter. After her father disappears, the girl is raised mostly by her aunt, who frequently beats her and locks her in a cellar. It is later revealed that the story reflects the true events of Miss Honey's upbringing, and that Miss Trunchbull murdered Miss Honey's father.

In the opening song, a child sings: "One day when I'm older I can be a soldier and shoot you in the face." In the scene where a boy is forced to eat an entire cake, the children encourage him and say he is figuratively "tightening the noose" on Trunchbull. There is a scene where Mr. Wormwood drags Matilda to her room.

Drugs/Alcohol

Mr. Wormwood smokes a cigarette and a cigar in an early scene at the hospital.
